The Future Of Advertising

The collapse of the online-advertising market in 2011 made marketing on the Internet seem even less compelling. Website usability, press releases, online media buys, podcasts, mobile marketing and more - there's an entire world of internet advertising opportunities to explore. We specialize in internet marketing strategy. We believe more and more online advertisers are turning to performance-based advertising to fulfill their Internet marketing objectives. Marketing on the internet requires that one be found using keyword searches and/or some form of online advertising.

What's in store for advertising in the future? It's all about creating interactive marketing tools for your business, as well as the addition of new and innovative 'Internet-based social media' in your marketing efforts. This goes to show that the traditional snail mail that has been so popular for many years will take a back seat when it comes to online advertising campaigns.

And it's all about having a positive response from your target audience. Interactivity is all about that concept. What makes your visitors satisfied means engaging them in experiences that evoke good memories for your clients. The more your interactive marketing gets inviting, the better it is for your target audience to hand over a positive response to your message. Such as a sale!

So what else should we expect in the interactive advertising campaign?

There's the use of entertainment for one thing. Website developers and marketers are looking at the advantages of creating a site that not only offers more information than you could think of, but also entertaining to boot. Not only do you get noticed and provide excitement to your target audience, more importantly, you are able to connect with them on more personal level. Hence, expert and smart advertisers use the interactive media to create that engaging relationship with their customers and prospects.

Some of the media vehicles that can help you market your business interactively include blogs, podcasts, online videos, and games. Along with these interactive media, marketers have been combining them with traditional media models such as snail mail ads to create that distinction and recognition in their target audience.

Let's take a look at some of the interactive media vehicles:

Blogs:

The idea behind a blog is that you are able to tell your story and your opinions, as well as invite viewers to comment on your story. There are many blogs online. In fact, blogs are able to provide the opportunity for business owners to interact with their customers and pool ideas to make their products even more effective. This is what makes blogs so popular - customers are actually able to give their two cent's worth to enhance the product they love or the service they just viewed online. All in all, it provides both clients and technology- minded people the satisfaction of being able to participate in such forums.

Videos:

Podcasts and online videos are very entertaining as they are able to provide highly entertaining commercials to demonstrate a product or service or even tell an engaging story that affects the emotions of your consumers. It provides a level of empathy among your customers for your business. YouTube is the most popular site to help you attract attention and interest in your message, not to mention that you'll generate traffic to your business.

Over the last few years, digital video has been in hyper growth mode, with a projected 80% of all internet traffic expected to be video by 2018. This is due to improvements in video technology, wider viewing device options, and an increase in content made available online both from television broadcasters and from other video services. But this growth is also due to video content publishers finding ways to better monetize their content. Digital video ad spend has been growing as well, to the tune of 66% over the last two years according to an IAB study, and according to eMarketer, will grow from $7.46B in 2015 to $9.59B in 2016.

This is the bottom line: utilizing interactive media to increase your market share increases your chances of getting a bigger piece of the market pie. By being closer to your customers via your interactive vehicles can go a long way in helping you build your brand and get you the leads you need to increase your sales and profits. By combining video along with your media advertising your offer will reach interested and responsive people.

Podcasts:

One of the best ways to share files that you've found online is to download a podcast. A podcast is a way that the creators and/or distributors of content can send their online materials directly to the computer of a subscriber. The subscriber can then view or listen to the content whenever they want to.

Podcasting works because of small files called RSS files, which are located somewhere on a web page. This RSS file is regularly updated, usually through an automatic update, with text and links to new media files that are available to be downloaded.

A podcast client accesses the RSS file from the subscriber's computer. Podcast clients are programs that go online to find RSS files for data that the subscriber has chosen to view. Most podcast clients are available for free, and many different ones are available to suit any unique need.

A download happens when the client downloads and views the file that is being offered at the feed's web site. The client finds links to media files that are included in the RSS file, and then it downloads those files, storing them on a subscriber's computer until the user wants to see them. Podcast files can be comedy shows, music mixes, or radio shows. Subscribers are often able to download parts of regular shows and play them on a home computer.

Downloads can be applied to any kind of file. The RSS file that allows generally audio and video files to be downloaded can also be tailored to apply to any data file. Some experts believe that podcasting may be used to distribute software updates, as well as demonstration programs, and go beyond simply sharing media files. Users would just have to subscribe to a feed with a podcast client. This could be a way to update users about anything.

Many possibilities for file distribution are provided with podcast downloads. This represents a different way of using the Internet by allowing information to come to users, instead of having users actively go out and visit each site. Podcasting could ultimately change how the Internet works. With broadband access becoming faster and more available, content will have a good chance of being delivered directly to a consumer more easily and more quickly than ever before. This approach could mean major changes for the Internet and make the Web even more integrated with the personal lives of its users.

Step 1: Choosing a theme, format, equipment, and resources. Labeling your podcast, "My Life" likely won't help it blow up on the iTunes' top podcast list. ... So choose carefully.

Step 2: Record an audio file. ...

Step 3: Convert the audio file into podcast. ...

Step 4: Get huge.

Microsoft Bing Ads & Google AdWords Pay Per Click Advertising Coupons <http://tools.seobook.com/ppc-tools/free-ppc-ad-coupons.html>

Pay-per-performance (PPP) marketing is a popular web advertising pricing model where a marketing agency or publisher will receive a given amount of money for each new lead or sale driven to a marketer's site. This can be a set dollar amount, or a CPA (cost-per-action), which can be a percentage of the sale or conversion to the marketer's site.

Summary:

The future of advertising is going to be all about interactivity. Whether it's in your advertising or on your site you'll need to attract and hold your prospects attention. Motivate them to visit your site and then entice them to order.

Make use of all the areas above to optimize your online campaigns.
