How To Get Inbound Links To Your Website

Inbound links are one of the most important assets in online business. In this report, you will find different linking strategies you can use without spending a fortune.

TYPES OF LINKS

DIRECTORIES

Submit articles as well as other work to directories.

If your website is directory-worthy, you may try to submit your site to directories. Try to visit <http://www.best-web-directories.com/directory-list.htm> to find directories that accept paid or free submission.

It is probably one of the most popular ways of getting inbound links to your site. A few of the article sites where you can submit to are ideamarketers.com, goarticles.com, ezinearticles.com, articlecity.com and articlesfactory.com.

Not only articles, depend on what you want to promote or the theme of your website, you can also submit your own scripts, images, videos, jokes, 3d models, quotes or other types of work depending on the requirements of the directory.

Some webmasters create scripts where other webmasters can use the scripts as long as they keep certain links that point to the creator's websites. This PDF is a prime example.

Example: CLCIK HERE FOR THE REBRANDER

Try typing into Google, phrases such as "submit cartoon", "submit movie" if you want to submit your works to sites other than articles. Finding the specific submission for your product or service is the key to obtaining high quality (relevant) backlinks.

The main advantage to Directories as opposed to Search Engines is that directories are edited by humans, whereas search engines simply return automated results based on keywords which may not always be the most effective way to quickly find a website that is appropriate to the topic being searched.

Websites are submitted to directories by the webmaster, where they are reviewed by neutral editors, evaluated, sorted into categories, and ranked within category according to relevance. They are then listed in a directory form that is simple to read and navigate for the average browser. For a website to create and maintain high web visibility (and therefore attract a high number of visitors) it is essential to be listed in a number of quality Directories.

The best known directories are Yahoo, Dmoz and Google, but it is worth being aware of the quality of the directory before submitting a site. The average browser will not explore beyond the second or, at most, third page of directory results for their searched for topic, but if the Directory is not of quality some websites listed in those all-important first few pages may not deserve to be there. The usefulness of Directories to return appropriate search results to be valuable to a site is under debate.

If links are being sold across the entire site, that may be indication of a lower quality Directory. Google is one of the worst culprits for targeting sites that sell links, and sites that appear to promote the Google page rank of their pages. This may not be indicative of how relevant a site is to the topic searched for - it is all too easy for crafty webmasters to manipulate keyword SEO to gain a higher Google page rank than their site deserves.

This is time-wasting and frustrating for browsers, and may result in them losing patience with the Directory all together. Another common problem with Directories to be avoided is that pages within the site may be linked only internally and not to other, relevant, quality, external pages. Search Engines will not find such pages if they are low on keyword content and they will be skipped over entirely.

Dmoz, the Open Directory Project (ODP,) editors are volunteers / they are naturally third-party neutral and will review and consider each submitted website on its own merits. Each editor applicant is screened for any conflict of interest, so any search results returned by Dmoz Directories can generally be trusted. The main downside to submitting a website to Dmoz is that the submission process can be interminable / although ultimately worth it in terms of relevant traffic directed to any website included in their directory.

The Yahoo! Directory rivals Dmoz for size and comprehensiveness, and was in fact Yahoo's initial reason for existence. It has since evolved away from the fundamental classic human edited format of Directories, by instituting crawler-based listings in 2002, but remains a quality Directory that can be trusted. The Yahoo! Directory is very clearly displayed on its homepage. LookSmart, and Zeal - LookSmart's non commercial are other famous examples of quality directories.

For a website to be listed in a trustworthy Directory such as Dmoz or Yahoo! can be one of the most important quality-assurance seals of approval and can be the essential difference between focused and relevant traffic to the site and random hits by frustrated browsers.

FORUMS

Posting in Forums

Look for forums highly related to your website. You will have the opportunity to place your link in the signature line by participating in forums. Just Google (Advertising Forums) for the top places to get your signature seen. I found that links in my signature have been crawled by some of the most popular search engines.

Forums unrelated to your site can also be accessed by participating in the topic of your choice and post including your signature. Since this is unrelated to your site the quality of your prospects may be diminished depending on your product or service niche.

Similar to participating in forums, you can also get inbound links by placing comments on blogs.

BACK DOOR

Creative Commons License

You can apply the Creative Commons License to your site and letting Yahoo discover you. Through the creative commons search engines, your site can get many targeted inbound links.

To find out more about creative common license, you can visit <http://www.creativecommons.org>

LINK TRADING

Reciprocal Linking (Link Swaps)

With this strategy, you get links to your site by also giving links from your site to other websites. Although it seems that search engines appreciate one-way inbound links more than reciprocal links, it is still a traffic-producing method you may consider to use. There are a few services available to automate the linking process. Try checking <http://www.linkmarket.net/> if you want to use this strategy. This well established service allows you to approve or disapprove link exchange requests from other webmasters.

LinkMarket is a reciprocal linking software that could also help you to trade links with other webmasters automatically.

Of course the possibilities of getting inbound links to your website could be endless. Be creative. By doing it successfully, you will be able to get your site listed or boost your position in the search engine and then build enough streams of traffic to your site.

Building one link at a time is a long, if you're serious about this business / Life-Long / task.
